

Kingswood University
A.A. EVANGELISM & COMPASSION MINISTRY (AAPX)
OBJECTIVES, MEASUREMENTS, & OUTCOMES
2022-2023

The A.A. Evangelism & Compassion Ministry (Praxis) degree is designed to prepare students to serve in evangelism and compassion ministries in various church and parachurch settings. The program uses the head (knowing), heart (being), and hands (doing) method of disciple-making that Jesus modeled in the Scriptures. As well as a strong Christian community and classroom instruction, there is a strong experiential component which allows students life-on-life encounters with lost and hurting people in their own cultural context, in large urban centres, and in another culture. Students are also exposed to a variety of social and spiritual issues, as well as ways of addressing these issues.

Because there is a significant mentoring component in this degree, the program is designed to help students develop in their ministry skills and dispositions. Assessment of student progress is, in some ways, more subjective. Students who enrol in this program who are not open to the intense experiences and mentoring tend to transfer out of the program before completion, thus, those who complete the program have, in large measure, met the objectives. Of those who do not continue in the A.A. Praxis degree program, up to half transfer to another of Kingswood's degree programs.

Transcript grades for successful completion of these experiences is based on not only participation in the various ministries, but also in students' abilities to engage increasingly with them, to reflect on the ministries and experiences, as well as student openness to mentoring.

OBJECTIVE 1 – A.A. Praxis students will have a foundation in a range of general education courses, biblical studies courses, spiritual formation experiences

While the focus of the A.A. Praxis degree is practical ministry, students complete at least 27 hours of general education courses, addressing communication, humanities/fine arts, natural science/mathematics, and social/behavioural sciences, and at least 25 hours of Bible and theology courses. Emphasis on spiritual formation means that students are challenged and provided opportunities to grow in their faith as well as in the knowledge of scripture.

OBJECTIVE 2 – A.A. Praxis students will understand spiritual and social issues present in the world, and be able to address them from a Biblical perspective

The course of study for this program begins with an examination of the biblical roots of compassion ministry, as well as historical and current models of such ministries. Students also study social justice from a biblical perspective, considering the corporate and individual Christian responsibility to address such issues. Although the topics for consideration change based on current issues, sometimes from year to year, the principles addressed remain consistent.

OBJECTIVE 3 - A.A. Praxis students will be prepared intellectually and experientially for further study in the fields of evangelism, compassion, and social justice

A significant number of students who complete all or part of the A.A. Praxis degree transfer into other Kingswood ministry degree programs, and specifically into the B.A. Ministry, Evangelism & Social Justice major. It should be noted that in the past four years, the Valedictorian and/or Salutatorian were students who had first graduated with the A.A. Praxis degree.

OBJECTIVE 4 – A.A. Praxis students will have first-hand experience of evangelistic and compassionate outreach work in a wide variety of environments outside of traditional church settings<sup>7</sup>

In addition to a core of general education and Bible/theology courses, students participate in a wide range of hands-on social ministries, which are graduated in nature and expectations, as students develop in their ministry skills and dispositions. In the first year of Praxis students spend approximately 50 hours per semester sharing their faith in various outreach settings through word and deed, receiving coaching, feedback, and evaluation from their professor/Program Director. Full engagement with this is measured through their grade in Regional Praxis I and II (PX 115 and PX 117). In year two they do the same thing in two week-long intensives, one in an urban setting in North America and the other in an international cross-cultural setting. Students answer a series of reflective questions and assign themselves a grade. The final grade in Urban Praxis (PX 250) and Cross-Cultural Praxis (PX 251) is assigned by the professor/Program Director.

CONCLUSION / ACTION STEPS

The data addressed in this report comes from the “COVID-19 years,” each influenced by the pandemic and accompanying health and safety regulations in different ways. While this cannot be used as an excuse, it was a contributing factor to the overall student learning experience. Although 2022-2023 was a more ‘normal’ years, at Kingswood, the impact of COVID-19 was by no means over. Canadian border restrictions were not fully removed until October 2022 and some ministry sites only re-opened during the 2022-2023 year. Further, it should be noted that lower enrolment in programs and courses means that one student failing to meet a benchmark can significantly impact the percentage of students meeting a target. For this reason, the analysis of data looks at trends more than minute fluctuations.

There is no doubt that among Kingswood programs, the Praxis programs suffered the most due to COVID-19 restrictions. This program includes weekly ministry trips to sites such as those listed in Note 7. Most of these ministries were closed and/or not open to additional volunteers in the 2020-2021 year; some re-opened in 2021-2022, and others not until 2022-2023. This has certainly affected enrolment; it was disheartening to be enrolled in a practical program when many of the experiences had to be cancelled. With an increased return to ‘normal,’ there are indications that this program will recover.

- In the Covid-years there were below-target scores in areas which are academic based, namely general education and Bible/theology courses (Objective 1, Benchmarks 1 and 2). However, these scores are beginning to rebound. The Bible/theology scores will be further analyzed as part of an analysis of all Bible/theology grades.
- This program is scheduled for a regular curriculum review in 2024-2025, with the input of a new Program Director (started fall 2023).
